Hebrews Trading With Egypt 1892 BCE (2104)

Summary:
Khnumhotep II (2 Egyptian governor) illustrating events that occurred during the 6th Year of Senusret II.
The painting evidently registers an actual event which Khnumhotep felt worthy of eternal repetition. It depicts a group of thirty-seven Semites in full size in the act of paying customs duties to the monarch's officials. A bold hieroglyphic text states that these Asiatics are supplying him with such important items as oil (ben, a mineral required for eye makeup acquired in Mesopotamia. Khumhotpe evidently feared that the place he would occupy in the hereafter might lack the mineral, as was the case in Egypt. The date given is the fourth year of Senusret II's rule, or about 1892 B.C.E. The leader of the caravan of tradesmen and artisans is named Abushes, a distinctly Hebrew name. It was, for example, the name of a top general under King David.
What is most remarkable about the rendering was the depiction of advanced tools and instruments as yet foreign to Egypt. Middle Bronze Age metal-smithing is one of the crafts practiced by the Abushei group, readily deduced from an anvil and a bellows loaded on the back of the donkeys. An Egyptian artist thus presents evidence of metalworking technology that had not yet been employed by Egyptians. Curvilinear, laminated bows are being carried by members of the troupe. At the time, the bows of Egyptian soldiers were made of simple arched twigs. A 12-string harp or lyre borne by another member would likewise be unknown to Egypt until new forms of music, games and dance were introduced in the Second Intermediate Period. Most striking in the great expanse of the mural were intricately woven fabrics of the clothes worn by both the men and the women. They were produced on an upright loom, another mechanism as yet unknown in Egypt, as were the vivid colors of the dyes employed, colors faithfully reproduced by the anonymous painter of the mural.

It is Impossible for men 2,000 year ago to guess lengths and shapes this accurately for a perfect design that meet modern engineering principals. Today's mathematical formulas have only been in existence for less than a 100 years, to be able to prove out such a design. To construct, this reaches beyond our present capabilities.
