

Right now, there is a growing possibility that widespread electric power failures will occur and endure, starting next week when the federal government conducts its announced blackout drill, which may go live and become a reality, as have the government's previous drills.

If the blackout goes live, society will be in desperation. I'm stocking up on canned meat, canned chicken, and looking to order canned freshwater fish. Avoid canned ocean fish because of the radioactive contamination from Fukushima. Please scan back through your inbox and read my six episodes of "NatGeoTV: American BlackOut . . ." Therein, the National Geographic TV Network is graphically warning the public of an imminent failure of electric power, nationwide.

Janet Napolitano, Director of Homeland Security, recently announced:

"a massive cyber attack and a natural disaster, the likes of which have never been seen before, are coming." [ABC-News]

The government recommends that you store water -- even tap water in bottles collected from your local recycling center. In addition to canned meat and chicken, it's wise to store dried lentils and buckwheat groats (from supermarkets and Asian grocery stores). I sprout them both together for vital nutrients and enzymes. Also, store those plastic bags of dried split peas, dried beans, barley, millet (from Asian stores), and other grains and legumes.

You cannot understand how desperately you will need this food and water until you go back and view my six episodes of

"NatGeoTV: American BlackOut . . ."

If the BlackOut does not happen, we will all breathe a sigh of relief.

If the BlackOut DOES happen, then we will still breathe a sigh of relief !
