

Planet X expert, and former CNN science journalist, Marshall Masters, presents a visual, easily understandable, and thorough background on the incoming dwarf star, which N.A.S.A. calls "Planet X". As Marshall says: "If you don't soon deal with it, it will deal with you." In other words -- you can run, but you sure can't hide, so get your protective gear ready, and stock up on supplies, before we are suddenly cut off from the luxuries of today's civilization by the cosmic blows coming Earth's way. George Noory speaks with Mat Stein about preparing for the solar blasts that many scientists see threatening to throw civilization back, technologically, about two centuries. George's other guest, Marshall Masters explains how an incoming dwarf star and its entourage of gravitationally captured comets/asteroids are saturated with electrified plasma from the solar winds, and therefore, it is these deep space intruders which are causing the very same solar blasts which, the mathematical odds show, will eventually strike Earth and revert life back to candles, campfires, hunting, and farming.
