Your tracking of Planet X (Nibiru of the ancient astronomers) as it appears against the backdrop of the star constellations is worthwhile for all of us who alert the people to the actuality of Planet X's existence, and more profoundly, of its ominous approach, as its nearing will gradually increase its gravitational pull upon Earth's mantle and crust (at its closest flyby of several million miles), thusly plucking up new mountain ranges from flatlands, and depressing plateaus to become sea beds.

Such a brief impulsive gravitational massage of Earth's mantle and crust would catastrophically recontour our Globe, generating crustal tides -- mountainous waves upon the land surfaces such that, when that cosmic hand would pass, those colossal crustal tidal waves would abruptly halt, frozen in place, forming the Rocky Mountains, the Himalayas, the Andes, and the Alps.

Studios observations of mountain ranges, with their upthrust snapped-crust jagged peaks, suggests that, at some brief interval in Earth's ancient past, some invisible gravitational cosmic hand transiently put a spin on Earth's crust, like one would slide the skin of an overly ripe peach over its slimy underlying flesh.

Can you use your expertise to determine where Planet X is in our Solar System, because that is the most important determination?
We should all be seeking clues as to X's location by examining the latest data on abnormal phenomena that might be occurring on the outer planets, such as storms, changes in the appearances of the outer planets, any orbital eccentricities, comet flybys and comet crashes into these outer planets, etc.

Amateur astronomer Anthony Wesley was credited by NASA for twice photographing comet crashes into Jupiter in 2009 and 2010. However, NASA would have easily detected both of these comet plunges before Wesley had photographed them. Clearly, NASA was concealing their knowledge of those crashes, but the amateur astronomer's publication of his own photos forced NASA to give credit to Anthony Wesley's photographic evidence, otherwise they would have had to publicly admit that they had earlier detected those impacts. Clearly, then, NASA conceals such comet crashes and flybys, because such events would indicate to scientists that our Solar System is now under the unprecedented threat of incoming swarms of comets and asteroids which are being gravitationally dragged in by your "dark star," a descriptive term for this smoldering dwarf star which does not emit visible light, but light of the longer infrared wavelength.

Why are the secretive global ruling banking families (e.g. the Rothschilds, the Warburgs) and the royal families . . . why are they now disappearing from the world stage, like cockroaches scooting into the woodwork when the kitchen lights are turned on?

Clearly, in order to save lives, including our own, it is imperative that we be immediately seeking clues as to X's location by seeking data on abnormal phenomena occurring on the outer planets, such as storms, changes in the appearances of the outer planets, any orbital eccentricities, comet flybys and comet crashes into these outer planets, etc. Such diligent persistent observations of the outer planets by amateur astronomers and stargazers can make these special folks the heroes of the human race, when you stop to think about it, because . . . studious political analysts (not on television) realize that government no longer cares about the people. By the laws of human nature, public servants always degenerate, in fact, into rulers over the masses; hence, we can believe that there is much that they will not tell us. The assassination of President Kennedy stands out as our most compelling lesson that our leaders are our rulers, and that they are secretive. This means that the masses, worldwide, are now in peril due to the wall of ignorance that has been erected around them regarding NASA's current fear of Earth-menacing asteroids.

When meteors strike in clusters, water supply systems, electric power supply systems, computer and communications systems, transportation by highway, rail, seaport, and air, etc., will all be paralyzed, instantly. Survival will be short-lived for most people due to the citizens' inability to grow their own food and their inability to obtain and purify their own drinking water.

This means that amateur astronomers' early warnings of celestial threats is critical to the survival of the people. Science-types of television networks (e.g. the Science Channel, History II Channel, Smithsonian Channel) regularly present worrisome documentaries on threats from comets and asteroids, because there are some conscientious folks in the higher echelons of the media who are receiving inside information about these increasing celestial menaces. But they must thinly veil this truth in documentaries and in fiction movies. Yet, if you read the few responsible large media outlets, such as a couple of the London newspapers, you will see the factuality of NASA's current fears plainly publicized.

To analogize our current peril under ignorance: when the outermost bees surrounding a beehive begin to buzz within reach of your head, whereas you never saw a bee before, then you know that their beehive must be approaching, and the initial phenomenon which you can expect will be a bee sting (i.e. a meteor strike) here or there. We recall the "Chelyabinsk, Russia meteor strike of February 2013. Do you recall the Qazvin Province, Iran meteor strikes of July 2015? No, you do not, because, although I have the YouTube journalist's video report, with his interview and his camera lens closeup of the meteor being pulled out of the hole in the ground, that meteor strike was concealed by the American media, and it was only reported by an obscure news service in Italy.

So, yet again, the secretive elite-owned mass media has obeyed orders to bury reports of celestial threats. It is quite understandable that such news would be concealed, because money is power, and money powers do not exist to warn the public of events which threaten their money and threaten their power to control the public's beliefs. Even Al Roker, on the Weather Channel, ridiculed the February 2013 announcement that was teleprompted before him: that the rare meteor strike upon Chelyabinsk, Russia was unrelated to the equally rare near-Earth flyby, on that same day, of a NASA-feared asteroid which intimately grazed Earth's atmosphere.

We who study the approach of this unheralded incoming "dark star" (this gravitationally Sun-pulled dwarf star) know that what NASA has actually termed "Planet X" and what ancient stargazers termed "Nibiru" is surrounded by a vast field of comets, asteroids, meteors, rocks, and even red iron-oxide dust -- bodies which Planet X had gravitationally shanghaied during its lazy inbound journey through deep space. As dwarf star X -- surrounded by its captured cometary bee swarm -- approaches the Ecliptic, and as it nears the outer planets, those outlying giants will gravitationally suck in, and also electrically discharge, these electrified plasma-drenched captives who became drenched as they entered the plasmatic heliospheric threshold of electrified confetti at our Solar System's electrified spherical gateway, the Heliosphere.

Hence, we will witness electrical discharges from these nearing electrified comets to the outer giants during these comets' passing flirtations with them. Physicist James McCanney had stated that ancient records and legends reveal that such fireworks were observed on Jupiter, even with the crude astronomy of those ancient times, because such inter-body lightning bolts were then visible to the naked eye, as colossal as those electrical discharges must have been, and will be again, in the coming months/years.

With emphasis stemming from the the value of life itself, I urge everyone (and even novices can easily do this) to relentlessly seek out reports by amateur astronomers and stargazers of aberrations in the ongoing affairs of the outer planets -- and to become vociferous reporters, alerting the Internet's many small unmuzzled news services as to this incoming peril, and to replace fear with confidence in your preparedness and in your trust of God, our Savior, who will protect, and once again, save all who seek His protection.

Hi John:

Thank you for writing. The Black Star was at the head of Virgo on August 15, 2015 (see attached diagram). Right now the Black Star from Earth perspective is far into Libra moving 'left' in the orbit diagram, as our planet is now moving behind the Sun and will be in alignment on November 11, 2015.

Earth will move to outside-orbit position in the first to second week of February 2016, when the Black Star stops moving left to stop and begin moving right on the orbit diagram from Scorpio back into Libra. There is no way the Black Star can return to the head of Virgo by March 26, 2016, as the Sun/Earth/Black Star alignment comes in the month of May. Remember last year (2015) we had that alignment on April 25, 2015 and the Black Star was at the feet of Virgo. That means the Black Star will be well into Libra at that alignment for 2016 and moving to outside-orbit position (if we have another orbit cycle), the Black Star will back up (retrograde) only to the feet of Virgo, before stopping and turning around about September 1, 2016. In other words, the Black Star is much farther 'left' in the orbit diagram than Gil realizes at this point. He would know that if he took the time to review my research information that matches the earth changes told by the science.

Your info and my reply is part of the coming newsletter.

Thanks again,

The WASHINGTON POST:

The U.S. Government's National Aeronautics and Space Administration (N.A.S.A.) excitedly announces the discovery of Planet X, which they then deceitfully call "a mystery body," after previously calling this object "the long sought Planet X" eleven months earlier in a landmark NEW YORK TIMES report heralding the launch of N.A.S.A.'s Infrared Astronomical Satellite. N.A.S.A.'s I.R.A.S., they stated, was built and launched with the specific mission of sighting that infrared light-emitting brown dwarf star which Dr. Harrington and others called "Planet X." Astronomers estimate brown dwarf stars to be as massive as one thousand Earth-masses, as a minimum estimation. JD

The third largest news magazine in the United States, U.S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT, reports that N.A.S.A.'s Infrared Astronomical Satellite successfully sighted the brown dwarf star which was causing perturbations in the orbits of Uranus and Neptune, noticed since the early 1800s. This brown dwarf star had been named "Planet X" in 1910 by astronomer Percival Lowell, and N.A.S.A. had published a document in the late 1980s by Dr. Robert S. Harrington, chief astronomer of the United States Naval Observatory, titled: "The Search for Planet X."

Finally, the discovery of what The NEW YORK TIMES called, "the long sought Planet X" is herein reported in US News & World Report.
