

Those who do not study the multi-faceted world of evidence of the intrusion of Planet X into our Solar System will say: Well, this may not be a cover-up; their telescopic technology is just getting better. Yeah, how convenient for their technology to magically leap ahead virtually overnight!

How convenient for the NSA(NotoriousSpies-on-Americans)-dominated NASA (NeverA Straight Answer) to find 715 new planets, all of which are so far away that you folks can just go back to sleep and ignore it when X's approachingly greater electrified solar flirtations change its color from invisible infrared to visible red, and that tiny red dot starts getting bigger and bigger in the sky with each passing night. Just go back to sleep, and when Earth starts flippin' and floppin', well . . . we'll be descending into our *elite* underground cities at Mt. Weather and Cheyenne Mountain, while you schmucks will be left with no preparation for the great upheavals, which we cannot tell you about, because then you would jump all over us! Don't you get our strategy? It's called "planet-sighting desensitization," or "bore the sheep back to sleep."

As Marshall Masters says, "Either you will deal with Planet X, or it will deal with you."

Remaining willfully ignorant means remaining willfully unprepared to protect oneself and ones family. JD

"We've been able to open the bottleneck to access the mother lode and deliver to you more than 20 times as many planets as has ever been found and announced at once," said Jack Lissauer, a planetary scientist at NASA's Ames Research Center in California."

Only scientists are aware that our Solar System is so vast, that it would logically take two or three decades for this brown dwarf star to be drawn in from beyond Pluto to our inner Solar System. JD
