The mainstream media just announced that Chase Manhattan Bank is limiting withdrawal amounts for those TARGET customers whose credit card information was snatched by the store.

I immediately sensed that this whole TARGET spying scandal was concocted to set up a financial collapse avalanche trigger; namely, to provoke this TARGETed segment of the nation's bank depositors to run to their banks in the fear that their banks may also limit the amount of their withdrawals. Certainly, this would increase the likelihood of a consequent stampede of unTARGETed bank depositors running to their banks to make large withdrawals.

That would be the banksters' desired and planned financial avalanche!

They want to close their doors. They must tell their customers that they cannot have their money, but they need to blame this grandest larceny of theirs on some tragic turn of events, and thus they plan to divert the public's fury away from themselves. The banksters know that even sheeple become outraged when their money is stolen.

We'll see how it plays out. Gerald Celente believes that their planned bank holiday will occur immediately following the Christmas spending spree, however withered that may be. John
