

~~ Weather Disasters Increase as Dwarf Star Approaches ~~

Three decades ago, Drs. Robert Harrington and Thomas Van Flandern of the U.S. Naval Observatory, in The NEW YORK TIMES [see below], reported the detection of a brown dwarf star, and they said that it is "within the gravitational force field of our Sun."

Since this brown dwarf is not in a circular orbit, then even today it is being pulled ever deeper into our Solar System. In recent years, among the outer planets, we have seen storms, positional shifts and variations in their wizard's eyes, in their ring systems, and in their facial landscapes, suggesting external gravitational and/or magnetic provocations [dwarf stars, like our Sun, are magnetic transmitting antennae]. Jupiter's Belt has altered and has even vanished, suggesting that it has been subjected to external plasmatically-electric or magnetic stimuli. Comets have crashed into Jupiter over the past two decades at an extraordinary rate, suggesting that a bee swarm of comets has been dragged in by some massive intruding gravitational beehive. Our Sun has been both excited and quieted, suggesting heliospheric penetrations from a deep space object(s), a phenomenon which would attract and collimate plasma so as to electrically discharge streams of plasma current back to their solar source, or sometimes away from their solar source, in plasmatically electrical flirtations with an outer planet, as the intruder underpasses a near-orbiting outer planet [Dr. Harrington had set out to telescopically prove that this dwarf star is coming in from below the Ecliptic, through the southern skies, which would explain the quasi-secretive construction of the South Pole Telescope]. Whether this intruding object causes electrical discharges to the Sun or to an outer planet whose orbital position happens to be within electrical striking range, its tendency to discharge would generally be heightened by our Solar System's unusually plasma-soaked, electrically conductive spatial medium, a medium whose conductivity was originally intensified by the very source which excited the Sun to spew out chronically strong space-electrifying solar winds (i.e. the source being this inflying plasma-attracting, Sun-zapping dwarf star). So, we may have been seeing an avalanche-like effect -- sort of like spouses badgering back and forth until they wind up shouting at one another -- to analogize this growing electrical firefight between Sun and heliospheric penetrator.

And, for over a decade, our hapless bystander, Planet Earth, has been in the throes of diverse traumas, ranging from geographically side-by-side (and chronologically back-to-back) floods/droughts, epic hot/cold spells, epic snowfalls, extraordinarily strong windstorms exhibiting bizarre patterns and effects, such as derechos and haboobs, chronic bizarre out-of-season and seasonally inverted weather patterns, extraordinary seismicity and volcanism, an unprecedented runaway of Earth's magnetic poles, anomalous magnetic rashes blotting Earth's face, as well as geo-density rashes due to thermal convections (plumes) in the mantle, and also, due to what I have offered as my theory that Earth's solid metal inner core has been magnetically forced off of Earth's center and is now revolving, as well as rotating, within the molten metal outer core, thus generating our now sustained rollercoaster-like jetstream pattern, which, in turn, creates that chronically clashing hot/cold boundary which is ripping out storm after storm in all regions of our planet.

The WASHINGTON POST:

The U.S. Government's National Aeronautics and Space Administration (N.A.S.A.) excitedly announces the discovery of Planet X, which they then deceitfully call "a mystery body," after previously calling this object "the long sought Planet X" eleven months earlier in a landmark NEW YORK TIMES report heralding the launch of N.A.S.A.'s Infrared Astronomical Satellite. N.A.S.A.'s I.R.A.S., they stated, was built and launched with the specific mission of sighting that infrared light-emitting brown dwarf star which Dr. Harrington and others called "Planet X." Astronomers estimate brown dwarf stars to be as massive as one thousand Earth-masses, as a minimum estimation. JD

The NEW YORK TIMES: "Clues Get Warm in the Search for Planet X": N.A.S.A. and other leading astronomers and astrophysicists proudly herald the launch of their Infrared Astronomical Satellite, and they declare that the purpose of this mission is to sight what they term, "the long sought Planet X."

The third largest news magazine in the United States,
U.S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT, reports that N.A.S.A.'s Infrared Astronomical Satellite successfully sighted the brown dwarf star which was causing perturbations in the orbits of Uranus and Neptune, noticed since the early 1800s. This brown dwarf star had been named "Planet X" in 1910 by astronomer Percival Lowell, and N.A.S.A. had published a document in the late 1980s by Dr. Robert S. Harrington, chief astronomer of the United States Naval Observatory, titled: "The Search for Planet X."

Finally, the discovery of what The NEW YORK TIMES called,
"the long sought Planet X" is herein reported in US News & World Report.
