

Hi Everybody,

Someone on the BCC list asked me about the origin of the word I use:

ILU AMON ATYS

This is the kind of thing that I have been waiting for: the listening audience to be engaged with what I put out there - not just accept it or be tantalized by it and go on.

I had been doing shows in June with Dr. Carley on Drew Raines' show A Marines Disquisition where I introduced the term. I had discovered that the Ancient Egyptian Magi said that the PRONUNCIATION of the words in the Spells was more important than the ritual.

Taking that as a point of departure and knowing that the ancient cultures used only consonants with no vowels and that the vowel sounds used were approximated by what the Europeans use (a = ah, etc) I started re-pronouncing every word that came my way.

I started saying things like Illuminati but broke it into consonantal syllables and adding the most likely vowel sounds. L L M N T

Instead of ILL LOOMIN ATEE the way that people typically pronounce it then defer to the handy 1785 myth of Adam Weishaupt, I wondered what the significance of the word might be given that we are looking at a 6000-year old Blood Cult from Babylon. You see, I DO NOT have a sense of Linear Time. That is a trap. To say that the Illuminati was invented in Bavaria in such and such a time and place is ludicrous. Just as saying that World War III will BEGIN on a certain date. WW III as I have said in public began in 1790 and the first shot was that of Jenner into a small boy who he killed with vaccination. If you are locked in Linear Time you will NEVER understand the significance of The Long Game and planning for a future that almost seems scripted. Well, it is scripted evidenced by Weishaupt's Protocols of Sion and its Operational Procedures Manual called Silent Weapons for Quiet Wars. This kind of thing would not be surprising if you knew the legends of the Tablets of Destiny.

Babylon derives from Baba ILI or Baba ILU, The Gate of the Great God ILU. LILU like ALL demons is an Androgyne (a gender-morphing entity) that can manifest as male or female. Yes, they change names as often as socks. The other half of ILU is Lilutuv, or Lilith, or KI-EL commonly known in Christian circles as The Whore of Babylon because that is EXACTLY what her name was back in the day.

Lilith is the Ancient Goddess of the Moon.

You can't have a Moon without a Sun, and both are the definition of Illumination (The Illuminated Ones), so the next syllable was logically Amon the Sun God of Egypt. This married the two Mystery Schools of Babylon and Egypt.

I struggled with the meaning of the word: ATEE because all that we have to work with is the consonant “T”. There was a small clue with the “I” at the end of the popular spelling but I still wrestled with the suffix “IS” as in ISIS, ANUBIS, because “IS” is another demon Family surname. But you are probably pronouncing in your heads EYE SIS, AH NEW BIS and completely missing the point that “I” in European vowel sounds is “EE”. So it would be AH NEW BEESE. That brought me to ATIS (ATEESE) but I did not have a name that was similar in my Pantheon List. An alternative spelling could be ATYS so I plugged that into www.scroogle.org and don’t you know...it is the Egyptian word for Prince.

So, my grand assertion is that the ILU AMON ATYS are the Princes of the Moon and the Sun. Another clue that I incorporated was from Stephanie Relfe’s Interviews with an Ex-Vampire where he talked about the Council of Nine operating at Heliopolis. The City of the Sun in Egypt. This was a Pharoanic Club Med. The Pharaoh GodKings were all Family so by extension I figured that the Illuminati had to keep the whole sick package in tight family alliance so this Council of Nine at Club Dead must figure themselves to be heirs to the throne since it is typical to have one King at a time. Hence, I assumed Princes.

I am not endorsing the Interviews with an Ex-Vampire series unless you are highly skilled at uncovering disinformation. A simple guideline is the riddle in the movie Labyrinth where the heroine confronted two guardians of two doors. One led to her goal and the other led to certain death. She asked only one of the guardians, “Which door would he tell me to use.” And she got the right answer. This is primary Boolean Logic. And, no, I will not tell you why it works.

Yes, my dear friends I make assumptions and assertions based sometimes on the facts and sometimes on the obvious shapes of the holes left where there are no facts. Dr. Carley and I would like to instill a sense of self-reliance in you too. We must rely on our experience, and intuition since we are not insiders and no one has been volunteering this information. If we have the good fortune to be right, then History will look back on us as the source and reference to this information. I always welcome criticism or some insight that might support or obliterate a preposition because the end goal is the Truth. Trust yourselves and your experience and ALWAYS CHECK OUT EVERYTHING FOR YOURSELF. This is why I love being asked how I arrived at this term. Someone cared enough to ask the hard questions.

You will notice that I put the Moon first because if you understand the “PAGAN” religions they are all based on the Female over the Male. Male dominated monotheism is practiced by very few ancient civilizations.

Fritz Springmeier said that after WW II the United States Military did a survey of Cathedrals and a very high percentage had PAGAN ALTARS hidden underneath the ‘Christian’ Altars.

Now, if you know anything about the Dark Arts, an Altar is what a Sorcerer uses to summon a Demon or Spirit (I don't see much difference but the distinction is always made – Are they Friendly Spirits, Bullwinkle?)

Again, we have to pause to break down the word: PAGAN.

That conjures many images for many people. If it does for you, please let me know, because I NEVER knew what the word Pagan meant until I looked it up. We are infected with Mind Viruses that make us think of a certain thing when we hear a word but if we don't know their origin we really are just giving a conditioned knee-jerk response.

<http://www.etymonline.com/index.php?search=good&searchmode=none&p=3>

Pagan: c.1375, from L.L. paganus "pagan," in classical L. "villager, rustic, civilian," from pagus "rural district," originally "district limited by markers," thus related to pangere "to fix, fasten," from PIE base pag-* "to fix" (see fact). Religious sense is often said to derive from conservative rural adherence to the old gods after the Christianization of Roman towns and cities; but the word in this sense predates that period in Church history, and it is more likely derived from the use of paganus in Roman military jargon for "civilian, incompetent soldier," which Christians (Tertullian, c.202; Augustine) picked up with the military imagery of the early Church (e.g. milites "soldier of Christ," etc.). Applied to modern pantheists and nature-worshippers from 1908. Paganism is attested from 1433.

Now, kids, you know me. I love this website, but I'm not just going to take a definition lying down. I have been re-pronouncing Pagan to see if there are any insights there, but the obvious deconstruction comes from the definition: Nature-worshippers. I have traced the lineage of Lilith through 6000 years and every major culture on this planet (including Navajo) and ALL of them have her listed as the goddess of Nature and Fertility.

Seems like a perfect fit.

You see, just because we have a word; just because it has an official or common usage; does not mean that the meaning hasn't been purposely or accidentally occulted. Pagan might conjure up some image of wild Druid (still Lilith Cult) naked cavorting out in the Green underbrush with antelope horns on your head or whatever Mind Virus was programmed for the association, and when you see the denegrating definition of it being the Religion of the hick peasant, peon, civilian, incompetent soldier it almost takes the edge off of what to my understanding is the PRIMARY MURDEROUS RELIGION OF THIS ENTIRE PLANET THAT IS PRACTICED BY WHAT PEOPLE ERRONEOUSLY AND ANNOYINGLY CALL: The Elite.

Another example of Opposite Day. Get people thinking that naked low IQ tree-huggers are Pagans and that it is not the religion of the Sophisticated Classes when it is actually the opposite. The Elite – I like to remind people – is conferring a title to thieves, rapists and killers. The NWO (Lilith Cult) do not DESERVE to be honored with a title of ELITE just because they have money and power. You would not say that John Gacy and Jeffery Dalmer were Elite if they were millionaires. You would say they were sick monsters.

There is no telling who has a Pagan Altar hidden under an Elite Tapestry but you can be assured that there is a Monster under the Bed and they are the Princes of the Moon and the Sun.