

X-Mark's The Spot

Mark 16: 15-20

“And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, & preach the Gospel to every creature. He that shall beLIEve & be baptized, shall be saved: but he that will not beLIEve, shall be damned. And these tokens shall follow thee that beLIEve, In my Name they shall cast out devils, and shall speak with new tongues, and shall take away serpents, and if they shall drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them: they shall lay their hands on the sick, and they shall recover. So after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received into heaven, & sat at the right hand of God. And they went forth, and preached everywhere. And the Lord wrought with them, & confirmed the word with signs that followed, Amen.”*

Margin Notes:

* As well Gentile as Jew.

 This gift was but for a time to cause men the more willingly to receive the Gospel which as yet was not evidently known.

 The miracles and signs follow the doctrine, as certain seals so that if the doctrine be false, the miracles can be no better. Deuteronomy ???:? (couldn't read reference)

My comments:

* So nice to know that the word 'creature' includes gentiles and jews. I thought for a while that the talking animals and trees mentioned in the Talmudic legends might have been included. Apes with rabies vaccines? Does this include hominid-type Aliens too?

 We can see that as early as 1560 that the Escape Clauses were in place in the margin notes. Emmanu-EL had said that the beLIEvers would cast out devils and be able to drink poison without harm but it came with a Time Clause that if you don't order before midnight tonight you won't get the free Ginzu Knives!

 Given that there has not been any scientific documentation of any miracles, we can drop into the default clause that the doctrine outlined in this version of the Bible is false, since we have no outside confirmation of

- a) casting out devils
- b) speaking in new languages
- c) taking away serpents is dicey since Good Ole Boys do Rattlesnake handling in church.
- d) drinking any deadly thing
- e) instant healing by magick hands.

Let's break this down further:

a) cast out devils

This implies taking a devil out of a possessed person then putting it back into the Ether so that it can cause mischief and infect some other unsuspecting person. Recycling spirit garbage. NEVER IN THE HISTORY OF PEOPLE OF CONSCIENCE HAS ANYONE EVER TALKED ABOUT KILLING THE DEVIL!!!!!!!!!!!!!! Including the Christ.

b) speaking in new languages.

I have heard endless stories of Pentecostals who got caught up in religious fervor (fever?) and started speaking in tongues. Of course no one recorded them, or had the linguistics broken down. Would it matter even if they did? After all, they were NEW languages. How convenient. Why aren't Psychologists and Psychiatrists all over this for some kind of Organic or Non-organic mental disease?

c) taking away serpents is dicey since Good Ole Boys do Rattlesnake handling in church.

I've seen Heathen third world natives dispatch poisonous snakes with a flick of the wrist. Does that count? Maybe it meant pulling out the snake symbiotes like on the TV show Star Gate?

d) drinking any deadly thing

Yeah. Let's put that to the Double Blind, Controlled Laboratory study. "...if the doctrine be false, the miracles can be no better..." If we are going to hold any of these people and their claims to their words, how many takers will we get? Don't Drink the Kool-Aid!

e) instant healing by magick hands.

Again, dozens of stories of 'laying on of hands' in and out of medical settings with some kind of improvement or drastic change but there is never clinical confirmation with documentation of any kind. Given that 13 people at a car wreck will give 13 different stories of what happened only seconds after the incident, how, in the name of reason, are we supposed to give credence and authority over the future of our lives over the UNFOUNDED assertion of this or any other miracle that happens in our current time let alone thousands of years ago, which adds another element of incredibility to the equation? The OTHER test of science is that it can be replicated over and over again with the same results no matter who is doing the experiment. There is too much involvement of the Imaginary Friend, the Prerequisite BeLIEf and the Magick isn't working because YOU did something wrong...

The word Gospel was shortened from the original Godspell, which by the spelling alone is very telling in the light of the Holy Virus that seems to hold some kind of Magickal spell over the minds of the infected.

Nice touch, ending the Godspell of Mark with the Amen to invoke the Amon Ra. What more proof do you need of worship of the Egyptian Sun God?

WILL A SCORPION STING ITSELF TO DEATH IF SURROUNDED BY A RING OF FIRE?

Now, folks, for the Finale of our show that should make you run for the Bathroom with a change of underwear if you are quick enough to understand the full import of my life's work:

It was known for centuries and perhaps longer, well before the discovery of Hankin in 1896; or of Twort and Bacteriophages in the 1915; that certain tributaries of the Ganges River could actually cure Cholera if they were bathed in. We now know that the Bacteriophage was discovered to have the ability to transfect: to insert foreign genetic material into another living cell. We know that this molecular biology was used exclusively to create weapons. We know that the first Christian Baptisms were done in the Jordan River WHICH IS PART OF THE GREAT AFRICAN RIFT! If rivers harbor Phages. If Phages can transfect genetic material. If the Holy Virus is more than just a play on words, then we have a Ground Zero point of contamination, a primary source of infection and a MEANS TO VECTOR THE MICROBE from this point in History forward.

At least from the Christian perspective.

Religious insanity has been around for a long time, but this is the first clear pattern that emerges that if Bacteriophages, as either free-living microbes, or Trojans inside host enteric bacteria, were able to infect people by immersion in polluted waters then by extension, these same organisms have a reasonable chance of infecting anyone who is 'taken down to the river' either willingly or against their will; being dipped in water that the previously infected religious people are standing in, so as to imply that their enteric bacteria or phages could pollute the baptismal water just from being in water up to their waists (or is that wastes?). All the pores and portals of the body are being polluted by immersion in this microbial soup.

A chilling confirmation of this concept of pollution via baptism comes from: BLOOD PASSOVER, The Jews Of Europe And Ritual Murder, By Ariel Toaff, Complete English Text Translated By Gian Marco Lucchese And Pietro Gianetti, 2007 www.bloodpassover.com/index1.htm

Toaff is a Jew. He is a professor at a university in Italy. He claims to be a neutral scholar.

http://zionism-israel.com/israel_news/2007/02/ariel-toaff-super-star-bar-ilan-prof.html

If you have read my Mah Sons paper you will find that there is confusion on just who or what an Ashkenazi is, so my reproduction of this material is to make my own points not to trip over a ready-made Enemy. That you can find articles on genetic anomalies in Ashkenazim in Wikipedia (grow up it is an NSA construct!) is meaningless. I could write an article right now about the defective genes in you or your neighbors right now and make it convincing. You don't know what is in a vaccine unless you made it yourself. You don't know what a genetic study reveals unless you have done it yourself and then they thought our cells were full of "Junk DNA" until they found out that it was important. Sure, the Trustees to this 'Prison Planet' have been murderous criminals but if you concentrate on Pawns and Corporals you will never get to the Kings or Generals in this game of Killing The Devil. And don't forget that you have spent your life in ignorance over the WOMAN behind the curtain (Lilutuv). You have been lied to about everything by a powersource that has been able to remain hidden for 6000 years, so when you are presented with an easily seen enemy you need to think: Opposite Day! So, with that stern framework as a jumping off point, keep in mind that the Ashkenazi were being PERSECUTED BY CHRISTIANS.

p. 28

But the most characteristic clause, absolutely generalized in the permits of Jews of German origin, but significantly absent from the permits of the Italian Jews, was that referring to protection against forced conversions to Christianity. In particular, the Ashkenazi appeared obsessed with the possibility that their children might be kidnapped, subjected to violence or swindled with snares and tricks to drag them to the baptismal font.

[“In the Piazza di San Marco, packed with innumerable people, they watched that maddened lunatic being burnt alive in the Jewish error, despising the offertory of baptism”] (Giorgio Sommariva da Verona, Martyrium Sebastiani Novelli trucidati a perfidis Judaeis, Treviso, Bernardinmo Celario de Luere, 12 May 1480, reported in [Bonelli], Dissertazione apologetica, cit., pp. 278); [“they were tied up and wood was piled up all around them. The wood was set light, which they perceived, and looked all around them while the wood cooked them and hardened them, with their laments and screams. The oldest one of them, tougher than his associates in martyrdom, exhorted them by reciting Jewish law”] in the Diarium parmense, in Rerum Italicarum Scriptores, vol. XXII Milan, Tipografia della Società Palatina, 1733, p. 345.

p. 135

The entire adult Jewish population of the city, totaling about eighty persons, were tried and condemned to be burnt at the stake (“wealthy persons, rich and influential, some of them famous rabbis and people of culture, who refused to sully themselves [in the baptismal waters] and to betray the One God, were burnt alive proclaiming the unity of the Creator”). The children, who were Jews and circumcised, were taken en masse to the baptismal font to be made Christians.

This was during the time of the Inquisition so everybody was turning in their neighbors and everybody was killing and burning everyone else EXCEPT THE WITCHES! This is why I am so very cautious about allowing my enemies to be chosen for me. There is a surge in the anti-Ashkenazi hate that could run into another 1200 AD reprise (another paper of mine) and those involved will certainly be stupid enough to kill their own friends and families while the Witches in High Places celebrate with amusement at the insanity of the Herd and revel in the bloodshed that is their POWER SOURCE. And I am sure that when the smoke cleared IF the Ashkenazi were the ‘bad guys’ they would still be around and stronger and everyone else would be dead. The Chinese warnings of Know Yourself include knowing that you are easily duped. Know Your Enemy means being able to distinguish foot soldiers from Demon Masters.

You MUST ask the question: Why did those Christian Witches Baptize at the Pain of Death? What exactly was it that they were spreading? It was certainly not the Love of God! Or...maybe it was. Isaiah 45:5-7 says God created Evil. Sounds to me like they were spreading whatever disease (Holy Virus) was in those waters.

River Jordan: Sacred, tainted and dying, By Joel Greenberg, Tribune foreign correspondent, December 3, 2006

Now, let us examine the Logical Dissonance at play later in the Blood Passover book:
There is a story in biology that I do not know if it is true:

If you surround a scorpion with a ring of fire that it will sense that there is no escape so it will sting itself to death.

Keep this in mind when you read these stories.

Then consider this:

You are surrounded by a Ring of Fire or an Insane Inquisition:

Do you –

Kill your family and kids? (and maybe take yourself out when the job is over)

or, do you –

Kill your damn enemy and take down as many as you can before they get you?

The answer is pretty clear here that we are dealing with scorpions. Funny thing scorpions. An Armenian with Persian background told me a story a long time ago:

A frog was on the bank of a river when a scorpion came up to him.

“Hello, Mr. Frog, I would like to cross this river but I cannot swim. Would you carry me on your back?”

“No! You are a Scorpion and you would sting me to death!”

“Oh, no, Mr. Frog, I promise I would not sting you. I cannot swim. If I stung you then I would drown.”

The scorpion and frog argued back and forth until the frog finally gave in to the scorpion’s request.

“Climb on my back and I will swim both of us across to the other side. You promise not to sting me?”

“I promise not to sting you.” said the scorpion as it climbed on the frog’s back.

The frog swam halfway across the large river and then the scorpion stung the frog.

“Mr. Scorpion! You stung me! You promised you would not! Now we will both die! Why did you do that?”

“It is my Nature.”

There is not a single damned thing Natural about the Blood Passover stories that purport to serve the Most Holy God by slitting the throats of children in order to ‘protect’ them from some other abuse. There is never the Balance within the Tao of meeting force with force. To exact as much pain and blood from the Enemy as they intend to exact from you. From both camps of Christians and Jews INNOCENT CHILDREN DIE! Most of the characters in the Blood Passover stories end up dead so why don't they die a noble death by confronting their enemies on the open battlefield in personal combat?

There is no difference between 1200 AD and what is happening today. The Witch Cult requires Child Sacrifice and has been doing it for 6000 years whether the participants were willing or not. All Peoples, all Races, all Religions have been practicing the Ritual Murders of Witchcraft or have been victims of those that do from the beginnings of Civilization. It is time for the world to learn from History.

p. 189

CHAPTER THIRTEEN TO DIE AND KILL FOR THE LOVE OF GOD

In the late 14th century or early 15th century, a woman from Esztergom, in northern Hungary, wrote to the authoritative rabbi Shalom of Wiener Neustadt with an urgent and pathetic inquiry. Some years previously, in her native country, on a Sabbath day, the local Christians had assaulted the Jews, threatening to baptize their children by force. Seized by despair, the poor woman, to prevent her children from forced conversion, seized a knife and piously killed them. She then fled, taking refuge in Poland. But she was now seized by remorse and was turning to the learned rabbi to find out how to expiate her guilt and earn God's pardon. Shalom of Wiener Neustadt had no hesitations of his kind and promptly reassured the woman that, in this kind of tragic situation, the Jewish mother had acted for the better and in an appropriate manner, and was did not therefore deserve to be punished in any way.

Years before, in April 1265, when the Christians assaulted the Jewish district of Coblenz, in the Lower Rhineland, a Jew, fearing his family might be baptized by force, decided to kill his wife and four children, cutting their throats with a knife. He then turned to Rabbi Meir da Rothenburg, one of the greatest authorities of Ashkenazi Judaism, asking if he should do penitence for that cruel action.

"Suicide for the sanctification of God is certainly permitted", replied the rabbi, "while, as regards the killing of other persons for the same reason, one must search for and find evidence in the texts. Any action of this type has been considered acceptable and even permissible for some time. We have personally learned and verified as true the fact that many illustrious Jews have killed their own children and wives (under similar conditions)".

...rather than justify such behavior on the basis of Jewish law, they preferred to recall illustrious precedents, which had, in effect, rendered these actions permissible by adoption....

German Jews were terrorized by the possibility of forceful conversion to Christianity. They were even more frightened of the possibility, which became a tragic reality in many cases, of seeing their own children violently dragged to the baptismal font.

p. 191

From their earliest childhood, the Jews of the Franco-German territories had been taught to view the Christian faith as a despicable religion, barbarous and idolatrous, dedicated to the worship of images and holy cadavers. Baptism and the forced conversion of the Chosen People to the religion of their cruel and ignorant persecutors was surely the quickest passport to a base and corrupt life, deserving the severest divine punishment in both this world and the next. Death, death without hesitation of any kind, was to be considered a beneficial and desirable alternative.

In view of the intolerable menace hanging over the souls of the tender infants, born to be brought up in the love of the True God and according to His sacred dictates, yet fated to be immersed against their will in the contagious waters of baptism, the lethal blade was the sole adequate response. The blood shed by these innocent children, put to death for the love of God, was said to have served to bring forward the time of redemption. Their sacrifice, like that of the uncontaminated lambs offered as a holocaust on the altar of the Temple, was thought to help arouse Divine vengeance against their idolatrous persecutors. This vengeance was to be consummated from on High, in the Heavens, but needed to be prepared on Earth. God's vengeance, and that of the fathers and mothers, compelled to shed the precious blood of their children by the extreme arrogance of the Christians.

Sometimes the synagogue was destined to be chosen as the favorite location for the sacrifice of these children and the sanctification of God's name. The place of prayer conferred solemnity and rituality upon the drama being performed. The Holy Ark with the rolls of the Law (Aron ha-kodesh), the pulpit, also called the almemor (or himah or tehah in Hebrew), the benches upon which the faithful were accustomed to sit, were all bathed in the blood of the uncontaminated victims, while laments combined with invocations, litanies and imprecations, opening the way to Heaven. The sacred nature of the Temple failed to slow the arm of those who rose up to immolate, nor did the act reek of sacrilege. Quite the contrary, these surroundings constituted the most appropriate theatre for this act of sublime martyrdom. The story of Isacco, son of David, sacristan (parnas) of the synagogue at Magonza, who committed suicide during the first Crusade killing his children and mother and setting fire to the place of prayer, seems illuminating in this regard.

In those days, the great majority of the Jewish population of Magonza, after uselessly seeking refuge in the bishop's palace, met death in an indiscriminate massacre. Few of their lives were spared. Among them, Isacco, the sacristan of the synagogue, had personally been compelled to accept conversion to Christianity. But after a few days, the poor convert, assailed by remorse and repentance, dreamed up a delirious ritual of expiation based on a series of human sacrifices intended to move the Eternal to vengeance in a bath of blood.

p. 192]

First of all, Isaac, seized by fervent hallucinations, put his mother to death, burning her alive in her house. He then dragged his children, "not yet of an age capable of discerning good from evil" into the synagogue. Here, on the pulpit, the almemor, before the Ark containing the rolls of the Law, with his own hands, he slaughtered them all, one by one, offering a sacrifice to God. "And as the blood of the unhappy children spurted from their mortal wounds, painting the door-posts of the Ark of the Law, the sacristan devoutly recited: "May this blood serve as an expiration for all my sins". Immediately afterwards, he set fire to the synagogue, running from one side of the hall to another, his hands raised to Heaven in an act of prayer, his chanting voice clearly audible outside the holy sanctuary. And among the flames, before the holy Ark, the miserable Isacco finally found the death he so desired.

A psychopath? A lunatic suffering from homicidal religious fits of insanity? A poor soul driven mad by desperation and seized by a self-destructive mania? A madman and masochistic fanatic? The anonymous author who reports this tragic tale has absolutely no doubt at all of this kind: Isacco was a "wholesome and upright person, pious, merciful, and God-fearing". His behavior deserved to be pointed out as an example to later generations, and all types of censure in this case were to be considered absolutely unjustified and inopportune. Isacco had decided to sacrifice his own children on the almemor, before the Ark of the Law, the holiest place in the synagogue, according to a ritual, recalling, on the one hand, the holocaust offered on the altar of the Temple of Jerusalem, and, on the other hand, the Biblical sacrifice of Isaac, which, according to the Midrash, had actually been carried out. The grisly example of the pious sacristan of Magonza appeared to inspire enthusiastic and zealous imitators. The synagogue was thus transformed, in time, itself into a sort of sacred slaughterhouse, in which, among moans and prayers, the blood of the women and children, sacrificed for the love of God, gushed forth in torrents: Holy Ark, pulpit, women's gallery, benches and steps were all stained red, as was the altar of the Temple.

p. 193

At Vienna in 1421, during that city's violent riots against the Jews, accused of favoring and supporting the Hussites, the rabbi Natan Eger visited all the local Jewish boys in their own homes, and instructed their mothers to slaughter them without remorse if the Christians attempted to baptize them en masse. One Yiddish chronicle reports that, on that occasion, the Jewish community gathered a great number of children together in the synagogue to prevent their forced conversion, as vehemently demanded by an apostate. "The Jews of the community at this point began to cry in a loud voice: 'Alas, (the Christians), may God forbid, intend to contaminate our children, holy and immaculate'. They therefore deliberated to deprive them of their lives in order to sanctify the name of God the Blessed.

They drew lots and selected the pious rabbi Jonah Ha-Cohen, who was responsible for putting the decision into action. This happened during the Festival of the Capanne (Sukkot).

"While the entire community murmured the formula of the call to repentance in a low voice, turning from one to another, the rabbi placed himself in front of the Ark containing the rolls of the Law, and cut the throats of all the children, one after the other. This occurred in the great hall, intended for men's prayers. The women were also slaughtered, one by one, in the antechamber of the synagogue, intended for them, and this to sanctify the name of God. The last women waiting to be sacrificed turned to Jonah, the rabbi, asking him to butcher her (without entering the women's hall, but) causing his arm to pass through the grid, which separated the two halls. Then Johan the rabbi, having no more strength to kill himself, removed the rafters in the synagogue, made a stack of them, and poured oil on them, asking God to pardon him for that which he had done to save their souls. Finally, he curled up on the almemor, setting fire to them from on top, and met death in the midst of the flames".